[T.E.L.L. May] Growing an Open Educator Community

When: 12 Noon (PDT) Tuesday, May 21, 2013

Where: T.E.L.L. sessions are held in the ETUG Blackboard Collaborate Room

Who: Brian Lamb, Thompson Rivers University and Will Engle, University of BC, Centre for Teaching & Learning

As open education continues to evolve, new challenges emerge in terms of supporting a growing community of practitioners. As we work to adopt open textbooks, share resources, and develop more dynamic and effective learning environments, how can we help one another to ensure the best prospects for realizing the promise of open education?

This session will describe some of the ongoing strategies...

avoid disappointment!

Keynote: Nancy White, Thursday June 6th, 2013, SFU, Burnaby Mountain

The blissful survival rucksack for engaged online learning

Human beings actually have a lot of experience engaging each other in learning. But sometimes we forget we have this repertoire of “ways of being together” that engage and delight us. Let’s explore and expand that repertoire. We’ll focus on the simple, replicable and often VERY fun things we can do to engage and support meaning making. And heck, these can be valuable in your day to day life, online or offline!
